Mission Study Class of W. M. S. of First Methodist Church.
The Mission Study class of First Methodist church met Monday afternoon at the church. Mrs. R. M. Bryant, as leader, gave a most interesting devotional followed by prayer. Mrs. Kenneth Spore presented "The Work of the Deaconesses in the American Church" in a most interesting manner.
Mrs. J. R. Billingsley gave a full and inclusive talk on "An Emerging Leadership." A beautiful vocal selection, "The Silent Voice" was given by Mrs. B. W. Edwards, accompanied by Miss Harriet Grace Story.
"Leaving the Mass" by Mrs. Webb Luster Jr. was a continuation of the study, "Christian Missions in America." Mrs. Bryant led in a round table discussion of the study.
The closing prayer was given by Mrs. Alice McMath.

Miss Williams and Miss Agee Fete Young Couple.
Complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Bailey whose marriage was an event of May 11, Miss Claudia Agee and Miss Marie Antionette Williams entertained at the home of the latter on Wednesday night. The honor guests were invited to a treasure hunt and were quite surprised to find that they were to receive all of the "treasures" that winning the prizes.
During the evening, a number of games were enjoyed with Miss Dorothy Martin and Mrs. Dolphus Whitten Jr. winning the prizes.

After the contests, the guests were invited into the dining room for punch and cookies. The beauty table was centered with a white wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom under a trellis. A huge white bow and wedding bells were extended above the cake.
The guests included the members of the Epworth League.

Mrs. Bill Wray Has Series of Parties.
Mrs. Bill Wray entertained at bridge at her home on Walker street on Wednesday afternoon. In the reception room, which was decorated with beautiful red radiance roses and mixed garden flowers, three tables were arranged for the players.

Mrs. Al Park received high score with Mrs. Merline Coop making second.

At the conclusion of the games, the hostess served a delightful ice course with cake.

On Wednesday evening, Mrs. Wray entertained the members of her Bridge club and one table of guests.

High scores were made by Mrs. Henry Sommerville and Miss Martha Cantley was second.

The guests other than the members of the club were Mrs. Thel Joplin, Mrs. Al Park, Mrs. Dillard Breeding and Mrs. J. W. Walker.

Personal Mention

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Briant and daughters, "Babs" and Judith, were recent visitors of Miss Mamie Briant, Mr. Paul Briant, and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Sanders.

DANGER

SERIAL STORY — ROMANCE AHEAD

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY! Larry is caught in the lurch. Bentley impudently aims his gun at Bentley and makes it impossible for him to escape. Bentley the next morning, Bentley is a call saying that Collins has been caught with the stolen car. The Colonel is determined to hang Larry. The Colonel and Bentley go to the truck, promising to come by for Larry at midnight. Monnie goes to Bentley's, determined to tell that girl what she thinks of him.

CHAPTER XIII

LARRY sat in the semi-darkness of the basement room that formed his prison, trying to decide what Bentley intended to do with him. It was evident that the narcotic smuggler hoped to avoid killing Larry himself, but it was equally clear that he would never permit Larry to be taken to trial for cattle theft. Larry knew too much about Bentley and his operations to remain alive.

Larry thought of Monnie. What a story Bentley told, she would not believe that Larry had turned cattle thief. If he had to die, it was comforting to know that she would always love him, always have faith in him. He was glad he had told her why he had come back to Texas. Perhaps Bentley would overlook his hand.

The ceiling light flashed on. The cellar door opened. Bill came in, a rifle in the crook of his arm. Behind him came Bentley—and Monnie!

"Monnie, darling!" Larry rushed to her, brushing past Bentley, caught her in his arms. She struggled to free herself, and not succeeding, slapped him full in the face.

"Let me go—you cow thief!" The words hurt more than the blow. "Don't ever speak to me again. I just came here to tell you how much I despise you."

Larry stared at her, uncomprehending.

"You—Oh I hate you!" she continued. "You came to the ranch, posed as a friend—just to get a chance to steal cattle. The ordinary rustler doesn't sink that low. And you made love to me—Lies—all of it—Lies!"

She drew closer to Bentley, linked her arm in his. "I even thought I cared a little for him, Mike. He fooled me, just as he fooled Dad and Pete Barnes."

"He didn't fool me for a minute," Bentley put in. "I had him spotted from the minute I saw him. I warned you—The fellow's a slick one."

"You don't know how slick he really is, Mike. Do you know who Larry Collins is—why he is here?" She did not wait for his answer. "Larry Collins is the brother of the man killed in the accident on Dead Man's Curve!"

"Monnie!" Larry shouted his plea for her to stop.

"Shut up!" Bentley commanded. "Go on, Monnie."

"It's true, Mike. He came out here from New York to find out about the accident. Probably hoped to get me accused of manslaughter. Claims his brother was murdered—when everyone knows he was drunk. Oh, Mike, I've been such a fool."

MONNIE's words doomed Larry's last faint hope of escaping Hugh's fate. There had been a chance that Bentley might have allowed the Hayhook to settle with him for rustling, but now Larry knew Bentley would never turn him over to anyone, alive.

"Was that your brother?" Bentley demanded.

"You ought to know—you killed him. I don't know how, but you did. Just as you intend to kill me—because Hugh knew what I know—You're running narcotics in here by plane, Bentley. You're getting away with it now, but you won't always be lucky."

"There'll be someone else hunting you after I'm out your way"—he was talking for Monnie's benefit—"Some day they'll get a tip, and when they do, it'll be goodbye Bentley."

"Well, folks, I've got a lot of thinking to do before Bentley decides to hang me—that's what you intend doing, isn't it, Mr. Bentley?—Nice to have seen you. . . . And Monnie—just forget all that stuff I told you last night. I must have been drunk." He turned his back on them.

Bentley moved to hit him, but Monnie caught Mike's arm. "Let him alone, Mike," she said. "He's just talking—smuggling narcotics—Who could ever believe Mike Bentley would smuggle dope? I certainly never will!"

The door closed behind them. Larry could hear them laughing as they went up the stairs.

MONNIE ran into trouble when she suggested returning to the Hayhook at once. Cordially, but firmly, Bentley insisted that she remain for luncheon, then fly up to Lost Canyon and see how the sheriff's search was progressing. On the surface, Bentley appeared to be his usual, affable self. Underneath the veneer, however, Monnie was sure she saw cold, relentless hatred. In such a mood, it was better to humor him.

They were just starting for the hangar when Monnie turned to Bentley. "Mike, will you do something for me? Don't let Dad hang Larry Collins!"

Mr. Wallace Steffie will arrive home this week-end to spend the summer. He has been attending Hendrix College at Conway.

Mrs. J. W. Walker (Sue Ellen Jones) and little daughter, Judith, will leave Thursday night for Detroit, Mich., where they will join Mr. Walker.

Mr. Bobby Ellen has arrived in Hope to spend the summer with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Ellen. He has been attending school at Arkansas State Teachers College in Conway.

Mrs. Luther Smith of Washington is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lewallen.

Mrs. Tulley Henry is in Saratoga because of the critical illness of her grandmother, Mrs. Carrie Mae Ellis.

HOLLYWOOD—"The Ginger Rogers" divorce stories, printed locally, contained the home address of Lew Ayres and apparently was noted by every salesman, promoter, solicitor and seeker of financial backing in California.

They've been swarming around the place, and the other day Ayres put up a stern sign at the front gate warning: "POSITIVELY NO SALESMEN, AGENTS, MAGAZINE PEDDLERS, DEMONSTRATORS OR CANYASSERS."

Ayres had made an appointment with his agent, Charles Morrison, at home that afternoon. When Morrison reached the front gate and read the sign, he turned around and went back. Next day Ayres dropped by the agent's office to ask why Morrison hadn't shown up. On the door was this sign: "POSITIVELY NO ACTORS, PLAYERS, THEATRIANS, HAMS OR PERFORMERS—YOU DOPE!"

Got a Job to Exercise
John Payne and Anne Shirley are having a swimming pool built behind their house. It's quite a project, and they signed a contract including a penalty clause with a large concern.

Payne decided he needed some real exercise, but that the only way he'd get it would be to assume an actual job as a laborer. So he wangled a temporary union permit, with his wages going to an unemployed man, and joined the crew digging his pool.

He did all right the first day, but next morning he was terribly stiff and sore. Besides, although he did not know it then, he had a case of flu coming on. Toward quitting time the afternoon the foreman appeared, he unceremoniously said, "I'm sorry, Mr. Payne, but I'm going to have to fire you. I've got another man coming tomorrow."

"You mean," demanded the actor, "that I can't dig in my own back yard?"

"Yes," said the boss. "You're a little too—ah—slow. Mr. Payne. We've got a contract with you to finish this pool on a certain date, and if it isn't ready then we'll have to pay you a penalty."

Marion Davies—Remember Her?

Robert Buckner, who wrote the screen play for "The Life of Knute Rockne," spent several weeks at Notre Dame doing research and discussing phases of his story with officials of the school. It was rather a tedious task, trying to please everybody, getting religious details just right, and keeping the material within the scope of a single motion picture.

One day Buckner received a summons to appear immediately before one of the top dignitaries. Most of his work had been completed by then, and he was afraid that some serious difficulty had popped up.

There was nothing reassuring in his reception, either.

It was a huge, high-vaulted room, dominated by the figure of a small, aged, parchment-skinned priest who sat behind a large desk and flexed his blue-veined hands. The writer tipped forward for what seemed like a mile and silently was motioned into a chair, where he mopped cold perspiration and held his breath.

The venerable man then began the conversation. "Mr. Buckner," he asked, "What in the world ever became of Marion Davies?"

The United States has an annual output of 500,000,000 cans of dog food.

Speedway Race Event Thursday

33 Have Entered the 4 Hour Gruelling Test

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Weather permitting, thirty-three or perhaps only thirty-two, race drivers will roar off, before some 125,000 spectators, in a gruelling four-hour test in the twenty-eighth annual 500-mile race at 10 p.m. Thursday.

The stakes in the Memorial Day marathon over Indianapolis' two-and-a-half-mile brick-and-asphalt speedway will be $100,000 in prize money. The winner will draw down from $25,000 to $35,000, depending on the number of laps he leads.

Doubt over the number of starters grew out of the breakdown Wednesday of an Italian-built Maserati to have been driven by Rene Lebegue, French soldier on leave.

Argentino to Compete
Assuring an international flavor will be Raul Riganti of Buenos Aires, Argentina, the South American champion at the wheel of a new Maserati—rated by most trackside observers as one of the fastest speedsters in the event.

Two former winners will be in the race. They are Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis, seeking to tie Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Calif., as a three-time victor, and Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles. Shaw will drive a Maserati, the same car in which he won last year. He also was first in 1937. Petillo won in 1935.

In normal times, theaters in London operating on Sundays are required to pay 10 per cent of their day's earnings to charity.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

By J. R. Williams

When Meeting a Tornado

The U. S. Weather Bureau doesn't attempt to forecast tornadoes but here is advice from a bureau expert on how to dodge one.

"If you are in your automobile you probably can outdrive the snaking cloud that you may see approaching from the southwest," says F. D. Flora, U. S. meteorologist for Kansas.

"If you are on the flat prairie and can't find a hole in the ground, pick up the feet and lay them down again as fast as they can carry you in a northwesterly direction."

Flora says northwest because tornadoes nearly always travel northeast.

This year has started off as a "normal" tornado year, if the trend continues, through to the end of the blowing season in July, more than 100 persons will have lost their lives. A midwestern belt that includes part of Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas usually is considered the "blow belt" but Flora says that twisters may occur almost any place in the nation.

They'll Take Gold to Those Mountains

DENVER (AP)—A new record for tourist travel in the west probably will be set this summer, says Joe H. Thompson, national travel bureau director.

He predicted 15,000,000 persons will visit the Rocky Mountain region and estimated they will spend $346,000,000. The number of tourists will exceed the total for 1939 by 10 per cent, he predicted.

Custards Help Summer Health

Menus Become Brighter as Summer Draws Near

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer
Menus become lighter as summer draws near, but don't let the family's meal get too light on nutrition.

Most grown-ups, as well as the more active youngsters, need their full quota of eggs and milk to keep them hitting on high. So plan deserts featuring assorted creamy custards, pies with frothy fillings and toasted brown meringue and fresh fruits and berries.

The custard danville, velvety in texture, uses up extra egg yolks. It's delicious, chilled and poured over peaches, bananas, pears or apricots. Beat 8 yolks in the upper part of a double boiler, mix in 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, one-eighth teaspoon of salt and a speck of nutmeg. Blend thoroughly. Pour in 4 cups of milk. Cook in the double boiler until custard thickens slightly. Stir constantly and be careful not to overcook. When custard is a little thick, remove the upper part from the lower part of the boiler, add 1 tablespoon of butter to the custard and beat thoroughly. Cool and pour in 1 teaspoon vanilla, a teaspoon of almond extract and 1/4 teaspoon lemon extract. Chill and the custard is ready to use. Make half this amount if the family is small.

If you are a coffee hound, try this Mocha Almond Custard: Melt 4 tablespoons of butter and mix in 4 tablespoons flour, 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 cup strong coffee and 1/2 cup milk. Cook slowly and stir constantly until creamy and thick. Add 4 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon vanilla, and 1/4 cup shredded almonds. Lightly fold in the beaten whites, and bake 35 minutes in a buttered baking dish in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven—350 degrees. Cool a little and serve plain or cream topped.

Fruit chiffon dessert fills the bill for that frothy, fruit filled pie. Mix together 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/4 cup flour, one-eighth teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1/2 cup each of orange and pineapple juices and water. Cook in a double boiler until very creamy and thick. Mix in 3 egg yolks, two-thirds cup berries (any kind) and 3 whites. Pour at once into a baked pie crust and bake 15 minutes in a slow oven—325 degrees. Cool and serve.

To lots of folks, old-fashioned custard pie heads the list of pastries so make up this one: Blend 1/4 cup granulated sugar with one-eighth teaspoon each of cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Add 4 well beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla and 2 cups milk. Pour into an unbaked pie crust. Bake 10 minutes in a hot oven—450 degrees and then reduce the heat to 350 and bake about 30 minutes—or until the filling is firm (but will shake a little) in the center. Cool on a wire rack.

Texarkana Team to Play at Fair Park at 7:45

The Bruner Ivory Team will play Rosehill Sports of Texarkana here Thursday night at 7:45. The Texarkana team has been victorious this year and should give Bruner a tight game.

The Sports are rated with the Kidd Ice & Dairy and the Magnolia Oilers both of Texarkana.

A pitching duel is expected between Ferguson of Hope and Smith of Texarkana.

Friday night Brookwood Gro. plays Snow White and C. C. C. team plays Allison Termite.

Britons Aid Pets During Air Raids

A Dog's Best Friend in This War is a Man

By ROBERT BUNNELLE
AP Feature Service
LONDON—A dog's best friend in this war is man—if he's on the same side. And that goes for cats, horses and canaries, too.

Great Britain, steeled against invasion, has 40,000 people standing by with bromides, bandages and 28-page booklets to prove it. These thousands organized to take care of their 45,000,000 domestic animals—yes, they counted them.

The Narpac (National Air Raid Precautions for Animals Committee) developed the program. The government furnishes the money—and the work.

Narpac has spent about $100,000 in taking an animal census, in providing each pet with a registered identification disc, and in setting up first aid stations and ambulance service. If a stray cat, kitten or wandering Welsh Corgi pup turns up at a hospital, all Narpac has to do is to look at his number.

During air raids, National Animal Guards will patrol streets, hustle wounded animals into cruising ambulances.

Narpac's booklet tells animal owners what to do when the sirens sound.

If your pet is a dog or cat, leave it in the house. If it's nervous, give it one or more 5-grain bromide tablets before you duck for the dugout. Stable a horse "anyway" happy. Animals aren't allowed in shelters.

Narpac found dogs and cats won't wear gas masks but that horses will. But gas proof kennels can be bought for $25 up or made out of a box, some wire mesh and a blanket saturated with bicarbonate of soda.

Among the folks who have one of these pamphlets is King George. His two youngsters have Corgis.

Narpac says that at the beginning of war many Londoners killed their cats for fear they'd be left to roam at large during raids. Now there's a cat shortage and an oversupply of rats and mice. Narpac is arranging care for pets that soldiers leave behind.

In addition to humanitarian aspects, the program is aimed to avoid dangers from loose animals running around, possibly wild with pain or contaminated with blister gas.

Deadly Gas in Autos

Tests have shown that carbon monoxide gas is present in measurable quantities in six of every 10 automobiles now on the road.

National forests constitute 13 per cent of Wyoming's total area.

THE PAYOFF

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor
NEW YORK—Blond Craig Wood's abiding 64-66-68-66-264 in the Metropolitan Open again stresses the advantage a golfer has when he knows his way around a course.

Wood, seven years was the head professional at the Forest Hill Field Club of Bloomfield, N. J., scene of the firing.

It will be recalled that Gene Sarazen had served at Forest Meadow, where he came down the stretch with the record 66 which bagged the National Open of 1932.

Frank Strafaci, who recently lost his golf bag, is playing with 11 clubs, and if the U. S. G. A. made another ruling limiting each set to that number instead of 14, it would be O. K. with the crack New York amateur.

Strafaci is in favor of only two woods, the driver and spoon, and a complete set of irons, with a regular niblick instead of a sand wedge.

Like many of the older heads, the public links product holds artistry and skill were taken out of bunker play with the legalization of the sand wedge.

An All-America football player and an All-America basketball star are expected to return to the wars next season—Whizzer White with the New York Giants and Angelo Henry Luisetti of St. Francis.

The Whizzer whizzed from Oxford to Yale when the war broke out.

The Colorado Phi Beta Kappa, belongs to the Pittsburgh club, which paid him $15,000 in 1933, but Owners Art Rooney and Timothy Mara are close friends, and a deal easily could be arranged.

making it possible for the ball-toting genius to perform behind a stronger line and in a more profitable setting.

Pacific Coast A. A. U. officials are confident the national organization will reinstate Hank Luisetti at its December meeting in Denver.

The tall Italian, who gained the reputation of being the world's greatest player while hanging up several all-time records leading Stanford to championships, was barred "for capitalizing athletic fame" in pictures.

With Andy K. a real factor following his impressive victory in the Peter Pan and Bold and Bad going as Eimelech's running mate, the Belmont Stakes at a mile and a half, June 8, looks as a better race than the Derby.

Some horsemen believe Bimelech would run faster and farther and more consistently if his tongue were tied down.

The dark bay Preckness winner, lets his tongue fall outside his mouth on the right side while running, and keeps it rolling around, as if licking his lips.

Trainers suspect the habit makes breathing a bit difficult.

Third Degree, which Eddie Arcaro booted home an easy winner in the Metropolitan Handicap, in which the previously unbeaten 3-to-4-favorite, Eight Thirty, was a disappointing fourth, brought James Butler's famous Questionnaire to the front as a progenitor last year.

World War Aces Gave Nazis Idea Inspiration for Today's Great Air Armada

(Second of Three Articles)
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON — The World War snatched aviation out of its cradle and sent it into the front lines. That it performed valuable service was surprising; that it foreshadowed a new course for all warfare is a marvel of military history.

German aviation entered the World War with two strikes on the Allies. Germany had had the foresight to standardize production of planes and motors. They had zeppelins, too. So the Entente shot 600 standardized craft up to the front lines against the "Aces" heterogeneous flight. Pilots called them Christmas trees.

Right at the start things happened. Rival pilots quit waving at each other on observation missions. A German flier bombed Paris, killed a few people. A British flier downed a German with a well-aimed pair of field glasses. Bombers dropped their missiles by aiming along two nails in the fuselage. Fighters went up to ward off bombers. Bombers called for protection fighters. And finally came the dog-fight you read about.

Dog-Fights in Design

Dog-fights of the air brought dog-fights of designers. In the end, the World War years wrote the most fantastic chapter of aviation.

National heroes, noted in fame, their feats stressed air fighting, ranked bombing and photography and observation as ordinary stuff.

Among the heroes was America's Frank Luke, Jr. The deadly mortar fire around the German balloon lines fascinated Frank. So he specialized in strafing balloons.

"You ought to see the fireworks around those balloons," he said. "The Hun has a short mortar gun, shoots up a string of flaming balls—like a string of onions. I went back twice against the last one, just to get 'em to send up another shower. Looks like Fourth of July flower pots. Mighty pretty!"

Luke's was a blazing glorious end. He had just strafed down three enemy balloons in the dusk and downed two enemy planes. In the getaway he caught a bullet in the shoulder, fell behind the German lines. As he came down he killed German soldiers from his plane. And when cornered, he snatched out his pistol, shot six to death.

Then, after 21 victories in 17 days, they got him.

Luke's is typical of the career of World War aces—reckless, headless, fearless, and most tragic of all, plain wasteful. These youths between 19 and 23 wasted their planes, and their precious lives. Only a few Richthofens, Foncks, Rickenbackers—cool fighters genius for tomorrow.

Guns Fire Through Props

From the day the Germans introduced the deadly Fokker, its machine gun synchronized with the propeller, it was nip and tuck. At the end the Allies were leading. But the Germans took the heavier toll in lives, and the Richthofen Flying Circus provided the forerunners of today's great V-shaped air squadrons.

In all the confusion, it was not unnatural that America should promise 15,000 planes to the Allies, deliver a pitiful handful; that near scandals should rack industries and governments. Beyond the glorious record of our air aces, our sole important contribution was the Liberty motor.

The World War proved three things about military aviation:

1. Early airplanes were swell machines for dropping oranges on targets at state fairs.
2. Fliers graduated faster than the captains of industry and the designers.
3. Wars of the future would be different, largely because the airplane was capable of vast improvement.

But despite aviation's record in the World War, the great powers almost ignored it for 20 years—with a single exception. German industry, teamed with German military genius, has since led the world right down to this moment.

But that's another story.

Tomorrow. Airpower then—and now.

Battle in the air... 1918. This remarkable photo, taken from a French flyer about to swoop down on the Germany below.

By PAUL FRIGGENS
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

They used to lean out of the cockpit and fire away with pistols, those first devil-may-care airmen of the World War.

But in February, 1915, the French ace, Roland Garros, invented the synchronizing gear permitting machine gun fire directly through the propeller, and the air war man had long dreamed of was under way.

It was a puny thing to begin with, but it ended up prophetic of the incredible suffering planes are bringing to Europe's millions today. More than 10,000 planes were put on the battle front before the Armistice, 3700 allied "crates" and 3300 belonging to the Central Powers. In addition, the Germans, through the genius of Count von Zeppelin, who got his first airship idea in the American Civil war, launched a fleet of dirigibles which proved almost as decisive a factor as the creaking "Jennies" themselves.

Paris and London have good reason to fear Nazi bombing raids. The first bombing raid in the World War was delivered over Paris in September, 1914. Based with the German army just 25 miles off, the taunting Lieutenant Immelmann soared over the capital every day at precisely 5 o'clock, showering small bombs and a message which read each time:

"People of Paris! Surrender! The Germans are at your gates! Tomorrow you will be ours!"

Paris suffered more than 50 air attacks in the World War, 63 plane raids were made on London, and 53 Zeppelin forays. But the British dropped 5,000 tons of bombs on Germany to the Germans' 275 dumped on England.

Unlike this war with its great fleets of bombers, the first great air war made individual aces—hundreds of them, including Garros, Rene Fonck, with 75 victories; Nungesser, with 43; Richthofen, with 80; America's Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, with 26.

Before it was all over 20,000 fights were staged in the clouds, 150,000 men were enlisted in aeronautics and governments began speeding up production for 50,000 planes should the war last a year longer.

Travelers Lose Out in 12 Innings

Pels Snap 3 Game Winning Streak of LeFebvre

LITTLE ROCK—New Orleans snapped the three-game winning streak of Wilfrid LeFebvre Wednesday night but it took the Pelicans 12 innings to do it. The Travelers went down, 6 to 4, as the graceful left-hander wilted under a four-hit barrage.

Earl Browne, an old Traveler hand who came to Little Rock as a pitcher with Kola Sharpe in 1932, was the lad who broke up the party. Browne's triple in the right field pocket sent Rogers home with the fifth run. Earl registered the sixth on Gillenwater's single.

Little Rock led, 4 to 3, going into the ninth and it looked like a victory with LeFebvre breezing along. But Ankenman's double scoring Pinch-runner Maltzberger tied the score and then the tension took hold. Ankenman played an important part in the Bird win. His single in seventh scored Bremer with the third run.

Left-handed Mi McMartynik started on the hill for the visitors and had allowed only seven hits when he went out for a pinch-hitter in the ninth. George (Pete) Hader, a right-handed pitcher, joined the Pelicans Wednesday, was the winner. Taking over in the ninth, Hader hurried out of jams in the ninth and tenth and retired the side in order in the eleventh and twelfth.

Woodmen to Plan 50th Anniversary

Meet Thursday Night to Discuss June 6th Event

Bois d'Arc Camp, Woodmen of the World, will hold a meeting at the Woodmen hall, South Main street, Thursday night at 7:30 at which time arrangements are expected to be completed for the Golden Jubilee, celebrating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the order.

The exercises will be held at Fair park Thursday, June 6, and will be participated in jointly by Popular Grove, 196, of Hope.

Prominent speakers in Woodmen circles from Little Rock, Hot Springs, Texarkana, and other towns will be on the program.

At the meeting this Thursday night a large class will be initiated into the order, with B. B. Ragland, of Little Rock, state manager for the jurisdiction of Arkansas, in charge.

You, too, may have every 13th pair of silk stockings free by joining our Rollins Hosiery Club. It's really a bonus for your hosiery budget that means more than pin money for those other items that you've been promising yourself.

Arkansas Guards Are Ordered to Maneuver

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—The Arkansas national guard, 3480 enlisted men and 219 officers and warrant officers, received orders Wednesday to engage in the fourth army maneuvers at Camp Ripley, Minn., August 4 to 24, with troops from Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, South Dakota, North Dakota and Minnesota.

Adjutant General Dan B. Byrd said it would be the first time since the World war that the entire Arkansas national guard had trained together.

Army Puts New Page in War Book

Officials Wonder About the Nazi Secret Weapon

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Over in the lock-long munitions building, whose architecture is early 20th Century whitewashed barracks, the army boys have torn from their books that venerable saying, "You can't beat the Dutch."

On the nice clean page they have inserted, there is a "Warning to Future Generals: The way those fifth columns work beats the Dutch."

Sitting down the reports of the Nazi's five-day blitzkrieg of Holland, the army experts have concluded that the fifth column again has proved itself the most valuable weapon developed in modern warfare.

The secret magic with which the Nazi hordes over-ran Holland although the Dutch had been preparing for such an emergency for years, can, say the army men, be summed up in two words: Internal combustion.

For example, from the very outset of the German invasion, snipers took a toll of Dutch soldiers from the roofs and windows of buildings even in the well-policed cities of The Hague, Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

Two Cops on Duty

When the sixth column, or parachute troops, arrived at one of the main airports near Rotterdam, only two civil police men were on duty—the only logical conclusion being that some one in the army had ordered all troops away from the airport at the zero hour.

In several of the principal cities, the air raid alarm system went completely haywire. Sirens screamed day and night, throwing the cities into utter confusion.

In Amsterdam, the water supply system—that vital artery which is the first objective of saboteurs—was shut off completely.

In The Hague, the heart of the Dutch government, there was an uprising which took on the aspects of an organized revolution.

Hour after hour, parachute troops were reported landing in localities where, strangely, Dutch troops were not.

And most significant of all, the Nazi invasion of Holland wasn't even off the griddle before England started a nation-wide clean-up of aliens.

There's one thing more, though this occurred in Belgium. Army officers who fought in World War I looked over the collapse of Namur, and the apparently ineffective resistance of the outer forts of Liege and ran back through the pages of memory. Kaiser Had Trojan Horse

There, they found the stories of the fall of these two great fortresses in 1914, and reports current then that a "fifth column" had been working for months with the German high command to bring about their capitulation. A former intelligence officer recalls that German imperialists, months before August, 1914, bought large estates near these fortresses, and showed a great predilection for building cement tennis courts. It was not discovered until Belgium was a shambles that the "tennis courts" were cement slabs 30 feet deep, and really hidden emplacements for big guns that battered the forts into heaps of crushed rock.

The conclusion here is that that "secret weapon" of Hitler's is no more than this same fifth column. The report that the men in Fortress Eben Emael suddenly discovered their machine guns and small cannon would not work was the clue. Somewhere among those 1,000 men who threw up their hands in surrender must have been dozens or even scores who walked the Nazi glory road instead of the trail to prison camps.

Art Objects Also Use Air Shelters

Berlin's Treasures Are Hidden Behind Sandbags

AP Feature Service

BERLIN — Berlin's show-piece, the costly Pergamon Great Altar of Zeus, lies hidden behind 30,000 sandbags to protect it against possible bombings.

The massive altar with almost 225 feet of reliefs, known to most American tourists, was restored and mounted in the Berlin museum after being excavated in the ancient city of Pergamum. Unable to move it, museum authorities decided to "sandbag" the altar where it stands.

Whenever possible, however, valuable paintings, sculptures, wood-carvings, ceramics and other museum pieces have been scattered to reduce the danger of their destruction to a minimum.

Officials of the state museums and the Reich's Air-Raid Protection Society were entrusted with the work. Their task was not only to find bomb-proof shelters for the museum objects, but also to make certain that the proper climatic conditions and the possibilities for taking care of them were at hand. Most of the pieces are irreplaceable.

The city of Halle, for example, removed its valuable art objects to the deep basements of a remote castle. There they will remain in check-lined with lead until the war is over.

German art centers in the West have removed their most valuable pieces to the nearby countryside.

Although the museums have been stripped of all their priceless works, their doors remain open. The empty niches have been filled with art which heretofore has been crowded into storerooms. Much of it never before had been on exhibition.

Thus in Vienna a show of "pianoes out of the Fifth Century" has been opened. Many other museums are exhibiting the work of German artists through history. The National Gallery in Berlin opened a painting exhibition called "Great Germany's First Battle for Liberation—1813-1815."

Sturgis Well Core Has Odor of Oil

TEXARKANA—One foot of a core salvaged from 15 feet at the Sturgis well near Fouke gave off an odor of oil and gas Wednesday and operators immediately prepared to draw another.

The core, of hard dense lime, was taken from 9422 and 9437 feet, but 14 feet of it was lost, according to reports.

H. H. Temple, bearing interest in the J and J Oil Corporation-Barnes No. 1 in section 4-16-24, two miles north and one-half mile west of Lewisville reported Wednesday that the well had found oil and gas saturation at a depth of 865 feet recently but was continuing in search of the Paluxy formation, believed located at around 3800 feet.

This formation, Temple believes, will give greater production than a well at 865. He said that if developed at the shallow indication the well would produce 12 or 15 barrels daily of oil of good density.

Missouri Pacific Buys New Equipment

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—The Missouri Pacific railroad announced Wednesday it had placed orders totaling approximately $1,200,000 for new equipment, including a three-unit streamlined passenger train for use between Memphis, Tenn., and Tallulah, La.

L. W. Baldwin, chief executive officer, said 11 Diesel switch locomotives, 30 covered hopper cars and 200 stock cars were ordered.

At the pace war moves these days, it's getting so the average European thinks nothing of going to bed a neutral and waking up in Germany.

Colorful Fashion Bloom at Belmont

Many Display Exciting Hats and Colored Clothes

By MARIAN YOUNG

NEA Service Staff Correspondent BELMONT PARK, La. — The brightly colored clothes and exciting hats of the spectators made the opening day of the racing season here a breathtaking spectacle.

A Billy Rose or a Cecil B. DeMille couldn't have done better.

There they were—the top-ranking socialities of a dozen American cities, including New York, with the well-manicured lawns and stately, budding oaks of beautiful Belmont making a picturesque background for the bright yellows, dark greens, vivid blues and handsome printed silks which they wore.

Their hats—be-flowered and be-ribboned to a fashion editor's taste—vied with the array of colors in the tulip beds. Their white gloves and other frosty accents against the green of the grass and blue of the sky achieved an effect that any theatrical producer might well admire.

Those who came to see as well as those who came to be seen were thrilled with the appearance, during lunch in the clubhouse restaurant before the races, of groups of fashion models. Sent by Fifth Avenue stores, the models moved about—Longchamps fashion—in stunning prints under reefers, thin wool dresses under flamboyant brilliant boxy jackets, suits and every imaginable kind of hat, from tiny calots to gigantic cartwheels.

The entrance of the models and the beauty of their chic costumes drew many a "why?" really as gay as Longchamps—from the box holders. But the beautifully gowned models did nothing to eclipse the appearance of the spectators.

Brenda Frazier, looking as pretty as ever, wore a navy blue sheer wool dress with huge hooks and eyes down the front, a navy felt calot with cockade of red, white, and blue silk and flowing veil. Brenda's escort, J. Stewart Kellog, carried her leopard coat.

Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson topped a chic gray wool suit with a hat which was nothing more or less than one giant silk rose attached to a bandeau

$73,500 A MONTH!

That's the approximate tax burden the beer industry shouldered for the citizens of Arkansas during April. And this figure doesn't include additional taxes paid to cities, counties and the Federal government.

Beer's taxes help the common schools, the Arkansas Service Bureau, the Agricultural Extension Service and the important farm experiment station, the Welfare Department and the Confederate Pension Fund.

Beer's taxes provide for the care of tuberculosis, the construction of public health work by the state and counties, the care and treatment of the indigent sick and the continued operation of the University Medical School.

The industry is vital to the economic progress of Arkansas. And through the efforts of this Committee, the industry is making a definite contribution to the social welfare of the state. Law-breaking retail beer outlets, wherever they appear, are being "Cleaned Up or Closed Up" by state officials with our Committee's cooperation.

YOU can help in this important task by patronizing only those retail outlets which do five up to the law and by reporting to this Committee or to local and state law enforcement officials those outlets which ignore their social obligations.

German "Pincers"

day night gave up as lost the battle of Flanders and in a great retreat, opened the flood sluices around Dunkerque to guard their last port of escape on the sea.

The bloody conflict in the north was all but over. The Germans thus were left substantially in control of France's northern industrial region and her northwest coast, across from England. At least, however, the battle had given the Allies time to build a strong southern front along the Somme and Aisne rivers for 200 miles across France.

Virtual collapse of the Allied cause in Flanders came when the Belgian army's surrender, ordered by King Leopold, left their flanks laid open.

While waters rose steadily in the vast system of streams across the plain of Dunkerque, French divisions fought to hold the rear while British troops defended points of passage for the main forces seeking the coastline.

The Allies brought on the inundation by opening the locks south-west and northeast of Dunkerque on the great canal that flows by the city and follows the coast for many miles.

In Dunkerque, the last Allied resistance was valled under Vice Admiral Abrial, 61, commander of the port. The Allied armies, navies and air force fought together in an effort to save as much as possible from the wreckage.

The retreat was harassed by heavy German fire. Some Belgian units, refusing to lay down their arms despite their king's order, were reported still fighting beside the British and French.
